CHIEF OF DEAD LETTER BUREAU LEAVES POSITION

Mrs. Emma J. Miller Resigns
From Postoffice; Joseph
Laiwai Her Successor

After 13 years of service as superintendent of the dead-letter bureau of the Honolulu postoffice, Mrs. Emma J. Miller has resigned and is a passenger on the Matson steamer Lurline today, going to California, where she and her son, George Miller, will go into poultry raising in the northern part of the state.

Mrs. Miller came to Honolulu in 1901 and entered the postoffice as registry clerk. Two years later she was promoted to the superintendency of the dead-letter bureau, and has filled the position efficiently ever since. Assistant Postmaster William C. Peterson said today Mrs. Miller's work here has been very satisfactory, and that the postoffice staff is sorry to see her go. Mrs. Miller's address here has been 1430 Kewalo street. She is the widow of George L. Miller.

The assistant postmaster has appointed Joseph Laiwai to succeed Mrs. Miller as superintendent of the dead-letter bureau. Laiwai is one of the oldtimers of the Honolulu postoffice, having been employed in it for the last 22 years, long before the office was turned over to the United States postoffice department following annexation. Laiwai has served as clerk to the assistant postmaster for many years. His old place has been filled by the appointment of John F. Daly, formerly assistant postmaster at Schofield Barracks, and last June reinstated in the Honolulu postoffice.

The assistant postmaster has also appointed A. Perez, the last substitute on the eligible list, as permanent clerk in the office, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Mrs. Miller. A new eligible list will probably be created by examination within a short time.

No further word has been received from Postmaster William F. Young as to whether he will return to serve out the remaining two years of his term as postmaster here or resign and stay on the mainland. A cable is expected from him within a day or two by Assistant Postmaster Peterson.

OVATION TO INDIAN POET

TOKIO, Japan.—Sir Rabindranath Tagore, the famous Indian poet, who has come to Japan to study the psychology of its people, has received remarkable ovations here. At each place his train stopped, he was acclaimed by the people. His path was strewn with flowers and garlands were hung about his shoulders. At one town a party of Buddhist priests boarded the poet's train and performed a service of welcome, burning incense all the while.

The poet will stay several months and as far as possible live a life of seclusion. This will be difficult, for admiration for Tagore and his writings is one of the powerful influences which dominate the Japan of today and the people have arranged everywhere to show their homage.

SMASHED DOORS ARE IN COURT TO PROVE CASE

Police Bring Evidence That Gambling Suspects Were
Barricaded in Room

Spilt doors, smoky lanterns, stools and broken boards were a part of the evidence in police court this morning in the case of Chinese arrested last night by Captain McDuffie on a charge of being in a barricaded place at a gambling game. The defendants asked for a jury trial and were committed to the circuit court with bail set at $10 each.

McDuffie says that in order to prove a barricaded place, he must produce the "evidence" so he brought along the broken doors, lanterns and stools which were smashed when the detectives entered the upstairs room on Hotel street, between River and Maunakea streets, the lanterns that lighted the way of the stairs, the watchman's seat, in fact everything that might serve as a protection from the police to the players of an alleged pai kau game. The windows to the room were barred with heavy steel rods, says the captain.

Few Chinese gamblers give the same name twice at the police station, according to McDuffie, and one of the defendants had apparently forgotten his hatly assumed title when called this morning. Three times Haliff Joe Nobrega said "Ah Chu" in stentorian tones. Following the third call Judge Monsarret sneezed violently, "Au Chu." The defendant stood up.

MORE GOOD ROADS ON HAWAII TO BE BUILT

Another good-sized macadam road contract on Hawaii will be awarded next week. Acting Superintendent of Public Works W. C. Woodward will open bids next Tuesday, August 8, for the Puukapu Homestead road. The road will cost about $9000, according to public works estimates. It will be of water-bound macadam, 10,000 feet long, and will open up the Puukapu Homestead district.

Capt. Thomas Nelson, U. S. N., retired, died at Annapolis, aged 51.
